BROSNIHAN NAMED NEW DIRECTOR OF GOLF
Korenoski New Head Professional At Quail Ridge Country Club

BOYNTON BEACH, Fla. -- Quail Ridge Country Club is proud to announce Daniel Brosnihan III as the new Director of Golf and Michael Korenoski as the new Head Professional. The duo have worked a combined 31 years at Quail Ridge, one of the top golfing communities in the U.S.

Brosnihan takes over for Charlie Bowie, who has run Quail Ridge's golf operation since 1984. Brosnihan becomes just the third Director of Golf in Quail Ridge's 41-year history.

Brian Sutherland, chairman of Quail Ridge's golf search committee and a vice-president at the club, said the committee explored hiring someone from outside but Brosnihan and Korenoski proved to be the perfect fit for Quail Ridge.

"The Committee felt that Dan and Mike both exemplified the personal qualities, attitude and strong work ethic that Quail Ridge members were accustomed to with the excellent performance of the Golf Operation established by Charlie Bowie," Sutherland said. "Countless members have supported our decision by their comments both verbally and through e-mails."

Brosnihan has been at Quail Ridge since 1999, serving as Head Professional for the last 10 years.

"I am extremely blessed to be the next Director of Golf at Quail Ridge," Brosnihan said. "Having learned under the tutelage of Charlie Bowie, I will continue the successes and honor the history and tradition associated with Quail Ridge."

Korenoski joined Quail Ridge's staff in 2000 and was named assistant head professional in 2005. He was promoted to First Assistant Professional in 2007 and Co-Head Professional in 2014.

Golf has always been at the forefront at Quail Ridge. More than 100 of Quail Ridge's residents have a handicap in single digits. Among its former members are past Masters champions Claude Harmon and Sam Snead and the club is headquarters of the prestigious Society of Seniors golf organization.

Quail Ridge recently announced it will be building a new $22 million clubhouse next year with completion expected by October 2017. Located 20 minutes south of West Palm Beach and only minutes north of Boca Ration, Quail Ridge Country Club offers its members two Joe Lee designed championship golf courses, extensive practice facilities, a 16-court tennis center, and a free-standing health and fitness center.
